Carolyn is a 52-year-old woman diagnosed with breast cancer that has metastasised to the brain. She is married but says that her husband doesn't play a significant role in the family.

When I ask her what I need to know about her as a person to better care of her, Carolyn says she's angry because she's the mother of three girls (15, 19 and 22 Y) and wanted to be able to raise her daughters. She's worried about what might happen to her after she dies as the father doesn't engage with them.

She needs honesty and wants to know all the information about her disease, and she feels that the doctors are not telling her everything.

She enjoys walking outside, feel the air in her face and listening to the birds singing. She says she will have some difficulties staying closed in the hospital.
