

FEEDBACK SCENARIO 2 – SUPERVISOR TRAINING WORKSHOP – SUPERVISED PHYSICIAN ROLE

You, the supervised physician, are a 30-year-old physician who arrived from Romania 2 years ago. You are single and live alone, but you do have a supportive circle of friends. You have been working hard at fitting into your new practice.

You are presently meeting with your supervisor, who has reviewed some of the charts of patients that you have recently seen. You have some difficulty keeping up with all of the charting. You know that you don't always enter new diagnoses into the lists of problems – you just find it too much work at times.

You know that there have been changes to the recommendations around prescribing benzodiazepines. You have inherited many patients that have been taking them for years, and have been having a hard time trying to convince them to make changes when they feel that they have been doing just fine.

Your supervisor has reviewed some of your charts, and you are going to have a discussion with him/her.
