Young woman (in her 30s) dealing with hematology oncology investigations; no diagnosis yet - facing a bone marrow biopsy. She's a single mom with a 12 year old daughter named Lily. She is a teacher. She has 2 dogs called Max and Lily. She calls their household unit "the misfits" with appreciation for their quirks. She has support from her family and wants them informed but finds the need to repeat information tiring. She finds the appts hard to fit in with her job and her parenting. She likes to be interacted with as a person not just a diagnosis ie enjoys hearing something personal from her health care providers. She is interested in extra support from CancerCare so I have made a referral to PsychoSocial Oncology
