

K.D November

K.D was diagnosed with end stage Ovarian Cancer. It was a late diagnosed late and treatment options are limited.

She is a busy mom of two boys in school. She has lost her energy to complete daily tasks. With this diagnosis, she has been overwhelmed and shocked by what is happening. She is more worried about her children and how this diagnosis and treatment will affect her boys. She has always been a planner and at this time, she is no longer able to plan. She is disappointed that she may not be able to watch her kids grow or even meet her grandkids.

She has always been someone that has looked at the positive things, but she is having a hard time accepting the cancer. She does not want a pity party; she wants people to be direct and honest with her, to talk straight on to her and not over her.

She is lady that has enjoyed people, being very social, filling her days with her family. Her music has been her outlet and spiritual release. She has not been a religious person and this has been testing her faith.

She is very appreciative of the questions and people wanting to find out more about her,
