

L.J.
29/06

L.J has a life limiting illness which she did not disclose. She has found herself admitted to the hospital for a prolonged period of time, she had been subjected to a multitude of tests.

When describing what aspects of care that are important to her L. J highlights that her autonomy must be supported throughout her hospitalization. L. J. finds herself increasingly anxious in the evenings since her hospitalization. She noted that the pace at which the nurses move makes her feel overwhelmed. L. J described herself as a quiet person who enjoyed reading and baking at home. L. J fears being a burden to her husband and even the nursing staff.

L. J worries about this information being shared with her husband, she is concerned he will worry about her anxiety. She doesn't want him staying at the hospital all day and night. She expressed that having an evening routine throughout her hospital stay would comfort her and alleviate her feelings of being a burden. L.J doesn't know what the future holds but she is hopeful to return to her quiet life at home with her husband.
