

RP April

R.P. describes himself as a musician, specifically a pianist who finds great comfort in listening to Bach music several times a day. He misses being able to play with his friends and get out of his room. Supported by his meaningful Christian faith and hymns like "Hymn of Joy," music helps him feel connected to something greater and "forget all the misery in the world."

What matters most to him is to stay home, decreasing trips to the hospital. If at some point a hospitalization is necessary, he wishes that it would be possible to listen to music even then.
